Whatever political party you identify with you are welcome here.

[00:00:27] Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
Whatever color, culture or creed you identify with, you are welcome here. If you are vaccinated or unvaccinated, you are welcome here. Now look around. Look around at these faces in this crowd. Take a good look around. This is America the Beautiful. And it's worth fighting for. You are worth fighting for. Your children are worth fighting for. Our freedom is worth fighting for.

[00:01:20] Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
My name is Mikki Willis. I'm a father, a husband, and an investigative filmmaker. I was raised in California by a single mom who did her best to care for four children on her own. As a child of the welfare state, I witnessed firsthand what happens to the psyche and spirit of those who become dependent on government assistance. Had my mother known the difference between a hand up and a hand out, she may have avoided the trap that kept us living on the edge of poverty like so many people are today. Living in fear of losing her welfare assistance. Mom remained single and lonely until the day she passed at 58 years young. Her life was cut short by a combination of toxic cancer treatments and grief. Just 34 days before she passed her first son. My brother was killed by a drug called AZT. Hundreds of thousands of innocent people died as a result of that prescribed poison. The pusher of AZT was none other than. Dr. Anthony Fauci.

[00:02:33] Dr. Anthony Fauci
The reason that only one drug has been made available, AZT, because it's the only drug that has been shown to be safe and effective.

[00:02:39] News Correspondent, Female
Well, it's certainly nice to know that the future looks brighter.

[00:02:44] Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
30 years later, there he was again. Same script, same actors, same performance.

[00:02:51] Dr. Anthony Fauci
These are safe and effective products.

[00:02:54] Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
Knowing what that man had done in the 80s and 90s, I couldn't believe he was still in a position of such power. As the world descended into synchronized tyranny, I began to ask myself, how did they get everyone to go along with this?

[00:03:18] Guelph, Ontario, Canada, 5/16/2020, Female Voice
Great. Oh, it feels so good. I know.
Obsessed with finding the answer. I began studying every moment in recorded history where masses of people devolved into a state of self destruction. Down that rabbit hole was where I discovered the work of G. Edward Griffin.

Again, let me say welcome to our home.

Since the 1960s. Mr. Griffin has been warning the world of the Communist plot to overtake America. Yes, I know Communism.

Mr. Gorbachev, tear down this wall.

That thing we’ve all been told fell with the Berlin Wall.

How do you measure such an astonishing moment in history?

It was Napoleon who said history is a lie agreed upon. Ironically, there’s no evidence that Napoleon ever said that. As we’re about to discover together, much of our history has been rewritten to serve an agenda that up until recently was invisible to the average person. Average like this guy. Everyone’s talking about the necessity for change right now, particularly here in the US. Over the past few months as a filmmaker, I’ve had the honor of documenting the political revolution. That was me in 2016, the year of my political awakening.

Come on board the Political Revolution.

I was touring with the Bernie Sanders campaign, creating media to help his grassroots movement grow. At that time, I knew very little about socialism and even less about democratic socialism. As it turned out, I wasn’t the only one. So my Bernie Bros. How do we redistribute wealth through taxation without expanding the powers of the federal government?

Bernie Sanders.

As confusion set in, I began turning my questions inward. Are they hypnotized? Am I hypnotized? That question. That one simple question activated some strange sort of faith healing. Suddenly. I could see. How did I not see this before? There were so many red flags for me.

The only solution is communist revolution. The only solution is communist revolution. The only solution is communist revolution. That’s why we need communist. That’s what we need.

I’m well aware that whether you’re here in person or through the medium of motion picture that for most of you it’s not easy to fit meetings of this kind into your schedules. But the fact that you are here indicates that you do have an interest in the subject. So in order not to waste any of your time, let’s dispense with the usual preliminaries and get right down to the business at hand. We’re going to examine in quite a bit of detail the communist theory and practice of revolution, particularly as applied to the United States. Now, this will not be something dreamed up out of thin air. This will be the strategy as taught by them and advocated by them in their own manuals, in their textbooks and in their schools. The new program of the Communist Party on this subject has this to say. The term socialism describes but the first stage of a new society that in its full development is called communism. Socialism is a transitional stage.

Jim Carrey everybody.

I went out today and bought me some freedom friendly Nike’s.

Yeah, that’s right.

That’s a salute to Colin Kaepernick, to Nike. Congratulations on your fantastic choice. Thank you so much. It’s good to be back in dystopian America.
[00:07:35] Bill Maher
The Republicans are running with the word socialism. They're trying to say.

[00:07:39] Jim Carrey, Actor
They are trying to scare people.

[00:07:40] Bill Maher
Scare people.

[00:07:41] Jim Carrey, Actor
Communism,

[00:07:42] Bill Maher
Venezuela, Trump says we're going to be living in Venezuela.

[00:07:45] Jim Carrey, Actor
I grew up in Canada. I'm here to tell you that this bullshit line that you get on all of the political shows from people is that it's a failure. The system is a failure in Canada. It is not a failure in Canada. I never waited for anything in my life. I chose my own doctors. My mother never paid for a prescription. It was fantastic. And I just got back from Vancouver and I keep hearing this like Canadians are so nice. Canadians are so nice. They can be nice because they have health care. Because they have a government that cares about them.

[00:08:18] News Correspondent, Male Voice
In Canada, the authorities say it's now a state of emergency. Swept through Canada's capital.

[00:08:37] News Correspondent, Male Voice
There's a socialist coup unfolding in Canada, and we taxpayers are funding it. In the recent years, a lot of Canadians have been watching their once well-regarded country become what some are even calling tyrannical.

[00:08:47] News Correspondent, Female
A country previously hailed as the most free and democratic in the world.

[00:08:54] G. Edward Griffin
Now the people's world. The official West Coast newspaper of the Communist Party ran this rather interesting editorial. "What is needed now is an effort that begins to approximate the magnitude of the problem. As a minimum, such a program should demand massive emergency action by the federal government."

[00:09:16] Justin Trudeau, Prime Minister of Canada
The Federal government has invoked the Emergencies Act.

[00:09:23] Chrystia Freeland, Deputy Prime Minister of Canada, WEF Member
As of today, a bank or other financial service provider will be able to immediately freeze or suspend an account without a court order.

[00:09:33] Male Voice
If you are involved in this protest, we will actively look to identify you and follow up with financial sanctions and criminal charges.

[00:09:40] Female Voice
Banks have already started to freeze the accounts of people involved in the protests.

[00:09:44] Pastor Artur Pawlowski
Please get out immediately. Get out! Intimidating people in a church during the Passover. Unbelievable. Growing up under communist dictatorship, I have been warning Canadians that that's what's coming. I could smell it. I could see it at every corner. We will not put up with this anymore. We are fighting back.

[00:10:03] Justin Trudeau, Prime Minister of Canada
Protests. Public protests are an important part of making sure we're getting messages out there. But using protests to demand changes to public policy is something that I think is is worrisome.
Okay. So here we have the prime minister of Canada saying that, yes, we have a highly functioning democracy and they have the right and freedom to protest. However, if those protests are used to demand change in government policy, then no.

Justin Trudeau, Prime Minister of Canada
The small fringe minority who are holding unacceptable views that they are expressing.

Crowd of voices, Male and Female
Freedom.

Justin Trudeau, Prime Minister of Canada
Do not represent the views of Canadians who know that following the science and stepping up to protect each other is the best way to continue to ensure our freedoms, our rights, our values as a country.

News Correspondent, Female
Liberal Prime Minister Justin Trudeau claims to be following the science, but Trudeau’s science often comes in the form of this bizarre authoritarian technocracy.

Dr. Robert Malone, Inventor of the MNRA Vaccine
I think that Justin Trudeau stepped on the landmine when he weaponized the banking system in Canada against the truckers. Those peaceful trucker protests know their most violent act was honking their horns and in retaliation, they had their access to their bank accounts, and anybody that supported them in any way had their access to bank accounts eliminated. And at that moment in time, we all came to realize what was really going down.

News Correspondent, Male Voice
Even with Sun TV watching for any slip, he was asked which country he most admired and referred to China.

Justin Trudeau, Prime Minister of Canada
As the level of admiration I actually have for China because their basic dictatorship is allowing them.

President Joe Biden, 46th President of the United States of America
I applaud China for stepping up. Excuse me. I applaud Canada. You can tell what I’m thinking.

Christine Anderson, Member of the European Parliament
Prime minister who openly admires the Chinese basic dictatorship, who tramples on fundamental rights by persecuting and criminalizing his own citizens as terrorists just because they dared to stand up to his perverted concept of democracy should not be allowed to speak in this House at all. Mr. Trudeau, please spare us your presence. Thank you.

Justin Trudeau, Prime Minister of Canada
Canadians know where I stand. This is a moment for responsible leaders to think carefully about where they stand and who they stand with.

Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
While Justin Trudeau makes a compelling case study, he is not the only dictator on the rise. Under the new rules provided by the Covid 19 emergency. Many other elected leaders were empowered to show their true colors. Interesting how they all marched in perfect lockstep while chanting the same slogans.

Justin Trudeau, Prime Minister of Canada
This pandemic has provided an opportunity.

President Joe Biden, 46th President of the United States of America
We are now with an economy in crisis, but with an incredible opportunity.

Male Voice
It's certainly a major crisis, but it also offers us a unique opportunity.

Charles the Third, King of the United Kingdom
An unprecedented opportunity to rethink and reset.

Female Voice
A great opportunity for reset.

Jacinda Ardern, 40th Prime Minister of New Zealand
Opportunity for us to reset.

Justin Trudeau, Prime Minister of Canada
For a reset.

Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
It's almost as if they all attended the same school of thought and studied under the same professor.
Some people would say this revolution is characterized by the fight of robots against human beings and we will win this fight.

Professor Klaus Schwab was born in 1938, in Ravensburg, Germany, where Nazi crimes against humanity were committed. His father, Eugene Wilhelm Schwab, was the managing director of Escher Weiss Ravensburg, a company that used slave labor to manufacture weapons of war for the Third Reich. While Klaus's father was at the helm, the Nazi Party awarded Escher Weiss Ravensburg the title of National Socialist Model company. Years later, Klaus Schwab joined the board of directors at Escher Weiss Ravensburg, where he played a key role in the development of South Africa’s nuclear weapons program during the darkest years of the racist apartheid regime. Today, Klaus Schwab is the founder and executive chairman of the World Economic Forum.

If you’d like to meet the people who are supposed to repair the state of the world or give a piece of your mind to the bankers who helped get us into this mess, we can tell you where to find a lot of them. The World Economic Forum.

Founded in 1971, the World Economic Forum, is an international private organization which receives billions of tax free dollars from its members and their global enterprises. Every year, the WEF brings together its members with world leaders, big pharma executives, tech titans, Hollywood celebrities, media personalities and Internet influencers to meet in the secluded mountains of Davos, Switzerland.

It is a tiny town folded into the Swiss Alps, a village where you could bump into Bill Clinton. Bill Gates, the head of Google and the Queen of Jordan, all in one place. A lot of reporters cover the forum, but few get inside. It turns out there are two Davos’s, one you see, and one you don’t. After hours, there are hundreds of private parties where deals are done. People who can’t be seen together in public can meet here.

Your Royal Highnesses, Excellencies, distinguished heads of state and government. The future is built by us, by a powerful community, as you hear in this room.

Klaus Schwab, the founder of the WEF, is particularly upfront and even proud of his ability to shape and influence world politics.

I created the Community of Global Shapers as a means, as a force to shape our common future.

And of course, their Global Young Leaders program is a grooming ground so that when they ultimately infiltrate cabinets,

We penetrates the cabinets.

They will likely tend to govern a certain way.

Nobody will be safe if not everybody is vaccinated.

The names and the countries he mentioned ended up being some of the most dystopian and authoritative during this pandemic.

Names like Ms. Merkel, Vladimir Putin and so on.

Now who could represent such a world better, the New Prime Minister.

In 2014, Klaus Schwab called for the Great Reset.

We need a great reset.
Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
Which he positioned as the solution to the world's most urgent issues. The dark reality of Schwab's agenda is detailed in his best selling book, Covid 19 The Great Reset. His endgame mission is to replace independent governance with a top down controlled one world government and a central bank controlled digital currency.

David. E. Martin, PHD, National Intelligence Analyst
And set your expectations lower. You're going to rent forever. We're going to celebrate the tiny house movement. We're going to do all of these things which sound cool because they're shaping our narrative so that we become capable of expecting less. What we need to do is not expect less. We need to remove inefficiencies so we can experience more. And that's the subtle distinction that the Great Reset is missing.

Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
Like most globalists, Schwab regards communist China as a shining model of how he intends to transform the world.

Prof. Klaus Schwab, Founder/Chairman World Economic Forum
We now welcome His Excellency Xi Jinping. China has made significant economic and social achievements under your leadership.

News Correspondent, Male Voice
China's influence on global affairs is growing. The founder of the World Economic Forum, Klaus Schwab, says that this is what motivated the group this year to invite President Xi Jinping to deliver the keynote address in Davos.

News Correspondent, Male Voice
Schwab said Xi's presence was a sign of the shift from a unipolar world dominated by the United States to a more multipolar system in which rising powers like China will have a step up and play a bigger role.

Prof. Klaus Schwab, Founder/Chairman World Economic Forum
I think it's a role model for many countries, but we have to go one step further. It's a systemic transformation of the world. Artificial intelligence is a metaverse. Synthetic biology. Our life in ten years from now will be completely different. And who masters those technologies will be the master of the world.

Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
Similar to his protege, Justin Trudeau. Klaus Schwab makes a fascinating case study. Yet he too, is merely the master of his own World Economic Forum.

Yuval Noah Harari, Advisor, World Economic Forum
Science is replacing evolution by natural selection with evolution by intelligent design, not the intelligent design of some God above the clouds, but our intelligent design and the intelligent design of our clouds. The IBM Cloud. The Microsoft Cloud. These are the new driving forces of evolution. Today we have the technology to hack human beings on a massive scale. And by this I mean that if you have enough data and you have enough computing power, you can understand people better than they understand themselves and then you can manipulate them in ways which were previously impossible. You know, the whole idea that humans have this soul or spirit and they have free will, that's over. Now, how exactly will the future masters of the planet look like? This will be decided by the people who own the data.

News Correspondent, Male Voice
Foreign powers can collect, store and exploit biometric information from Covid tests.

News Correspondent, Male Voice
US intelligence officials tell CBS News that China is trying to collect Americans DNA in hopes of controlling the future of health care.

News Correspondent, Male Voice
China's test kits are a tool to help China compile genetic data.

News Correspondent, Male Voice
The Chinese aren't the only ones exploring this technology. The US is working on it as well.
The White House is ramping up its Covid response, announcing Americans can once again get free Covid test kits as concerns are growing over.

Yuval Noah Harari, Advisor, World Economic Forum

Data is the most important asset in the world. Those who control the data control the future not just of humanity, but the future of life itself.

Everywhere she goes, Owyang Haoyu is followed. What she buys, how she behaves, is tracked and scored to show how responsible and trustworthy she is. It's called the social credit system. A person's reputation is scored on a scale of 350 to 950. It's big Data meets Big Brother, expanding how the government monitors understands and ultimately controls its 1.4 billion citizens.

A good score brings benefits, but people with low scores lose rights. The cinema names and shames people considered untrustworthy, plastering their details, even their addresses across big screens.

And information collectors are paid to report on their neighbors.

The Supreme Court has created a blacklist for so-called bad citizens. Among them is this journalist. He got a little too close to uncovering corruption among high profile party members. He was blacklisted. They only realized when he tried to buy a train ticket.

Once you're blacklisted, you can no longer get a bank loan, start a business, buy an apartment, or even send your children to a private school.

By using the mechanism of social credit, will be able to establish a blacklist of people. These punishments will serve as a whip to rebuild moral values.

And few here are willing to criticize it, something that may pose a risk itself for a bad score and the life that comes with it.

It may seem scary, but it's just like that here. We're used to it. And anyway, we don't have a choice.

China wants obedient citizens. Criticism or resistance among the population is virtually nonexistent.

This woman's door was kicked in by police when she refused to go to quarantine.

Now, these videos show rows of metal containers which are being used to house Covid 19 patients. Some of them have complained that very little food is left for them in the freezing metal boxes.

Chinese government officials now installing fences in Shanghai, blocking people from leaving their homes.

For some, Shanghai feels like the world's largest prison.

Five minutes ago there were only a few screaming, now suddenly everyone is screaming

How does a handful of autocrats gain total control over a population of 1.4 billion?

I have two master's degrees, one in clinical psychology, one in statistics. And at the beginning of the crisis, I started to study the statistics a little bit. The initial mathematical models and the initial statistics all had dramatically overrated the dangerousness of the virus. That was the moment when I started to to think how it was possible that an entire society and an entire population was in the grip of a narrative, which in many respects was a blatantly wrong. After a few months, it became clear to me that the only mechanism that could explain what was happening in society was what is usually referred to as mass formation. The mass formation is identical to hypnosis, and this term refers to a specific kind of group formation, which has very special characteristic effects at the level of individual mental functioning. And one of these effects is that an individual that is in the grip of mass formation typically loses every capacity to take a critical distance from what they believe and from what the group believes in.
[00:26:17] Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
You would think it would be people with lower IQs that would be more susceptible to this, but it seems to be the other way around. Are you seeing this?

[00:26:24] Mark McDonald M.D. Author of United States of Fear
I have seen this. And it does seem to be predicted by educational status and IQ.

[00:26:31] Del Bigtree, Host of The Highwire
We look to be verified for our belief system right. And so a doctor goes to the CDC. The CDC says this is true. It must be true. I'm staying in that zone. It's actually people outside of the system going, well, I want to challenge the CDC here for a second. Where's this study come from? Where is it? You know, and that's what I do. All of these people were kept out of the conversation.

[00:26:49] Neil Degrasse Tyson, Astrophysicist
All I can comment in there.

[00:26:50] Del Bigtree, Host of The Highwire
And you were wanting me to sign on to a social contract with a scientific method isn't being used.

[00:26:55] Neil Degrasse Tyson, Astrophysicist
I'm not interested in medical pedigree. I'm interested in medical consensus.

[00:26:59] Mark McDonald M.D. Author of United States of Fear
People who are highly intelligent tend to go and get a lot of degrees. Those people have spent so many years in institutions to get those degrees that they have developed a trust and confidence in not only the educational institutions, but those that support them, which are largely government bodies. And so they start from the place of if it's told by the university, by the government, it's probably going to be true.

[00:27:22] Del Bigtree, Host of The Highwire
What I've learned about science is that it's really imagine they're looking at like a fragment of the world and it's all they see. It's all they're looking at the world. They don't see the world.

[00:27:33] Mark McDonald M.D. Author of United States of Fear
So I think that there's a disconnect between people who are smart and have lots of degrees with actual reality, with the lived experience of nature of life that you don't see with people who are actually working with their hands outdoors all of the time.

[00:27:48] Prof. Mattias Desmet, Author, The Psychology of Totalitarianism
A mass formation typically emerges in a society when very specific conditions are met first and for all. The most central condition is a major part of the population needs to feel lonely.

[00:28:06] News Correspondent, Female
Doctors say the very rules to keep people safe from the virus are doing great damage when it comes to anxiety depression and even suicide. And now everyone is suffering, but children are particularly at risk.

[00:28:18] Dr. Zev Zelenko, Physician/Scientist
The real pandemic here is the psychological warfare that's being waged on every single human being. You see, if you take a human being and you put them in a chronic fear state and you couple that with human isolation, what happens is they psychologically decompensate and live in such emotional pain that they will gravitate in an irrational way to anything that you promise them will alleviate that pain.

[00:28:47] Prof. Mattias Desmet, Author, The Psychology of Totalitarianism
Once people feel disconnected from their environment, they will typically start to experience a lack of meaning making in life. And under these conditions, if a narrative is distributed through the mass media indicating an object of anxiety and a strategy to deal with this object of anxiety, they suddenly connect to one small object of fear for instance, the coronavirus. And afterwards people don't feel lonely anymore. They feel connected again.

[00:29:18] Male Voice
Let me hear if you've had the Pfizer vaccine. I'm here for Moderna AstraZeneca. That's if the anti vaxxers.

[00:29:35] Prof. Mattias Desmet, Author, The Psychology of Totalitarianism
The new kind of social bond is highly problematic. Just because the connections between the individuals even deteriorate more and the bond between the individual and the collective becomes stronger and stronger and stronger, which make them willing to sacrifice everything for the collective itself. It's well for the future of its children. Everything. Something else that is really characteristic of individuals in mass formation is that they become radically intolerant. For dissident voices.

[00:30:05] Don Lemon, News Correspondent, CNN News
The people who are not getting vaccines, it's time to start shaming them. What else? Or leave them behind.

[00:30:11] Jimmy Kimmel, ABC News

[00:30:36] Arnold Schwarzenegger
You're a schmuck for not wearing a mask.

[00:30:38] Howard Stern
And just say it's mandatory to get vaccinated.

[00:30:40] Arnold Schwarzenegger
Screw your freedom.

[00:30:42] Prof. Mattias Desmet, Author, The Psychology of Totalitarianism
People who do not go along with the masses are stigmatized, and in the end, the masses are inclined to destroy the people who do not go along with them. And they do so as if it is an ethical duty to do so.

[00:30:56] JP Sears, Father/Comedian
Getting good people to do bad things, harmful things while thinking they're good things. It's a dangerous place to be because it looks great. You feel great while you're being used.

[00:31:12] Dr. Robert Malone, Inventor of the MNRA Vaccine
They will sacrifice themselves and they see it as a virtue because it demonstrates their complete obedience to the cult, to the group, to perform ritualistic behavior which causes them harm.

[00:31:26] Prof. Mattias Desmet, Author, The Psychology of Totalitarianism
One of the most clear illustrations of this was when the leaders of the Communist Party in the Soviet Union were sentenced to death, often tortured to death. They did not object. They said things like, If this helps the Communist Party, it's my pleasure to do it. That's something that was observed in all major examples of mass formation in history.

[00:31:58] Lily Tang Williams, Chinese Immigrant/Educator
I was born in communist China two years before Mao started his Cultural Revolution. So we had to be indoctrinated and chanting slogans and holding Chairman Mao's Little Red Books to say, Long live Chairman Mao. Long live Communist Party.

[00:32:17] Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
Inspired by Soviet Union dictators Vladimir Lenin and Joseph Stalin. China's communist leader Mao Zedong borrowed from the playbook of the Russian Revolution. To fight anti-communist forces. Lenin organized a military branch of his Communist Party known as the Red Army. Following suit, Mao branded his army the Red Guards. However, Mao's soldiers were not enlisted from his military. His Red Guards were made up of high school and university students.

[00:32:53] Lily Tang Williams, Chinese Immigrant/Educator
So he used young people to start a cultural revolution to top down statues, burning old buildings and demonize all religions, going after all dissident voices, and to turn all the Chinese against each other. Family turned on each other, neighbors turn on each other.

[00:33:13] Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
Chairman Mao, as he was known, was deeply influenced by Lenin's ideas on Marxism and revolution, and often praised Stalin as a great leader.

[00:33:23] Lily Tang Williams, Chinese Immigrant/Educator
He started his Great Leap Forward campaign in the 50s and killed too many landlord owners. 40 million to 60 million people estimated starving to death. The people were trading their children's dead bodies to eat, to survive. Cannibalism was everywhere.

[00:33:44] Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
Through war, torture, execution and famine. Chairman Mao caused the death of 80 million innocent people, making him the deadliest dictator of all time.

[00:33:55] Mark McDonald M.D. Author of United States of Fear
China shaved the heads of women, put them all in unattractive asexual clothes, did the same thing for the men. This technique has been used in the 20th century by every totalitarian regime.
Mao wanted to create a genderless society. That's why girls like me could not wear beautiful clothes and cannot do makeup. We have to just look like a boys unisex, no gender.

Mark McDonald M.D. Author of United States of Fear
They sexualize the population so that there's no more desire, no more bipolarity of male and female. Everybody looks like an automaton. And then what do they do? Rather than turning towards one another, they turn towards the state.

Lily Tang Williams, Chinese Immigrant/Educator
So the only thing left for me a child to believe in is communism. And the Mao was the new God.

Now in China, the government is not only cracking down on Muslims, but on other religions as well as it pushes to assert communist ideology.

Here's something else that is banned in China Falun Gong, a religious movement that emphasizes on spiritual enlightenment and cultivation of virtue.

Winston Liu, Falun Gong Practitioner/ CCP Refugee
5000 year old Chinese civilization were founded on faith. Communist regime is atheist, so any philosophies which encourage people to believe God believe good things, it's something they don't like. I decide to escape China after serious persecution. I have experienced.

Under this pretext of Covid 19 coronavirus, the Chinese Communist Party has intensified its persecution.

Crystal Chen, Falun Gong Practitioner/CCP Refugee
We were arrested several times and detained in various detention and brainwashing centers.

Over the past few years, a vast network of camps has been built across Xinjiang.

A series of classified bulletins show how easy it is to be singled out by the Chinese government for education and training.

The US Defense Department says as many as 3 million are being forcibly detained in reeducation and forced labor camps.

China calls them thought transformation camps built to prevent extremism from spreading, but reports indicate they're more like prisons.

When I was detained in detention center, I was. Handcuff and hung over a radiator pipe with my toes barely touching the ground. And I was hung over there for three days. The CCP guards brought four male detainees into my cell and began one of the worst experiences of torture and on the brink of death. I realized I could do nothing but turn to my belief. So I pray to be saved. Huh? Moments later, one of the four male detainees suddenly fainted on the floor. Which interrupted the torture.

I love China because my parents were heavily persecuted for their practice of Falun Gong. From age one to age five, my grandparents were taking care of me because my parents, they were always inside some dark cells being tortured. My first clear memory of my mother, I was brought to a brainwashing center and saw her being tied up to a chair with like people behind her guarding her. And she had a very thick plastic tube inserted into her nose and she was being force fed at the time. She just looked like she was in so much pain. And I was I was five at the time. That was. It's just very traumatizing. Mhm. My school principal actually came to me several times and told me not to be a part of my parents and to report any activity that my parents would do. They're installing all the lies and hatred into the younger generation.

The young people are used today to do the American Cultural Revolution, to turn the kids basically not to trust their parents anymore and say. Oh, my parents don't understand me. I'm confused. I need to turn to my teachers, turn to other authority figures, look at the Mao's Cultural Revolution to say. How many similarities are there?

Communism will win. That's. That's not a joke. That will happen.

You are happy. With what was happening in the USSR between 1917.
It's easy to understand, easy to sell to the masses, and, I might add, deadly.

Mikki Willis, Director of Pandemic series
The fathers of philosophy, Socrates, Plato and Aristotle were all staunch critics of democracy. History's greatest minds all observed that even a well-intended democracy can breed deception, division, and ultimately total control by the state.

Aristotle wrote that democracy is not just the rule of the majority. Democracy is a system in which the majority is in charge, respecting the basic elementary rights and principles of minorities, if not, democracy becomes a tyranny of the majority.

Socrates himself became a victim of this very process. He was sentenced to death by a majority vote for protesting the rights and protections of the minority.

This country was founded on the principle that the individual is sovereign over the institution of government, and it's about a philosophy of governance that says that you are free, individual or a philosophy of governance that says you're serf and you're subject.

We have inalienable rights just by virtue of being human. And so their primary responsibility as the government is to protect those rights.

These aren't rules to govern me. They're rules to govern the government. Like what? You know what you are and are not allowed to do to me.

We are a constitutional republic with a representative democracy. So people do vote, but we have a separation of powers. So if you majority vote to eat you for lunch, the Supreme Court can say, no, you cannot.

And how do you protect the minority from the majority? You write down a set of rules on a piece of paper, you say this, we can do that. We cannot. At the top of the paper, you write the word constitution and then everyone agrees to follow the rules, no matter what the temptation. And when you're finished, you've created a constitutional republic.

It was Thomas Jefferson who said the republic is the only form of government which is not eternally at open or secret war with the rights of mankind.

Now, we hear a lot of talk today about right wingers, left wingers, extremists and moderates. The political spectrum concept, if it has any meaning at all, is a measurement scale showing all the variations in government. Now, the extremists at the zero end would be those who advocate no government at all. The anarchists, the extremists at the other end would be those who advocate total government. And who are they? Well, the communists, of course, but also the Nazis. The fascists, No matter what they may call themselves, if they advocate total government control over the people. They are all, by definition, totalitarians. The debate is not between conservatives and liberals. It goes back in history long before those words were ever invented. The opposing points of view properly are identified as individualism versus collectivism. The individualist believes that the rights of the individual must not be obliterated by the desires of the collective or the group. The collectivist, on the other hand, believes that the group is more important than the single person within it and that the individual must be sacrificed if necessary, for the greater good of the greater number. The individualist believed that every man has a personal and direct responsibility to provide first for himself, next for his family, and then for those outside his family who may be in need. The collectivist, on the other hand, declares that the individual is not personally responsible for charity or raising his own children, providing for his aging parents, or even providing for himself for that matter. This is a group function of the state of government itself.
Lily Tang Williams, Chinese Immigrant/Educator
Everything we talk about socialism, communism, globalization and Nazism. Guess what? It's all collective society.

Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
Collectivism on an international level is essentially known as globalization, which is often promoted as a framework for unity and sustainability under the guise of philanthropy. The leaders of the globalist movement leverage every possible crisis to advance their plan to replace national sovereignty with a one world government.

Prof. Klaus Schwab, Founder/Chairman World Economic Forum
We are confronted with so many crises simultaneously. What does it need to master the future?

Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
It is the globalists who are behind the destructive new methods of control, like ESG, the acronym for Environmental Social Governance. Similar to China's social credit score. Esg is a ranking system that tracks a company or country's carbon footprint, as well as its commitment to diversity and inclusion. A low ESG score can lead to severe consequences, including reputational damage, legal and regulatory actions and loss of investors and bank credit lines. Within the last decade, numerous nations and thousands of major brands have been coerced to adapt to the ESG program, and today, many of them are paying the price. In 2018, the World Economic Forum published an article on its website entitled How We Will Make Sri Lanka Rich by 2025. That article was removed once it became known that food prices in Sri Lanka had nearly doubled and that millions of their citizens were facing starvation.

News Correspondent, Female
Now, what caused this? Farmers protested and asked the government to work with them on slowly improving farming practices to be more environmentally friendly rather than implementing harsh bans. But the government was more interested in maintaining a high ESG score with its creditors like BlackRock. As a result, food production dropped drastically, with farmers expecting crop losses of 85%. The country had to begin spending money on importing food when it was previously self-sufficient. Sri Lanka is a cautionary tale. What's happening there could be a foreshadowing of what's in store for us if we don't take heed and learn some lessons.

Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
The Dutch government was one of the first to sign on to the ESG system. Dutch farmers pleaded that the rush to adapt to extreme new regulations would result in the destruction of the country's food supply. The Netherlands is the second largest agriculture exporter in the world, earning the title of the tiny country that feeds the world. A collapse of their system could trigger a global food crisis. Yet the Netherlands prime minister continued to persecute Dutch farmers until they were forced to revolt.

Prof. Klaus Schwab, Founder/Chairman World Economic Forum
Where do you find still such a prime minister in the world? You find it in the Netherlands and it's Mark Rutte.

Male Voice
And remember too, the Netherlands is the pilot program of the world food hubs and the World Economic Forum has assigned to the Netherlands what they call this global secretariat. I'm using, ironically, a communist term for it.

Klaus Schwab's golden pin up boy, Prime Minister Mark Rutte is busy fulfilling the agenda of the World Economic Forum's Great Reset by turfing farmers off their own land. Perhaps the most.

Mark Rutte, Prime Minister of the Netherlands
Important lesson I've learned in my years as Prime minister of one of the world's most outward looking trading countries is that national interests are often best served by international cooperation.

Martin Armstrong, CEO of Armstrong Economics
Schwab has sold this idea because they're up against the wall. Okay. You have all these governments that are basically broke. So what will happen is if they defaulted, then all the people have lost their pensions, they've counted on it, and they're going to be storming their palaces with pitchforks. Schwab has sold the idea that, well, we go towards Marxism and you can still retain power.

Male Voice
None of these net zero climate schemes work without massively disrupting or even destroying the lives of the little people.

The Kwak Brothers, Podcast Hosts
If you think about what created wealthy people wealthy throughout the many years of our human history was the ownership of land. And you have governments right now that are looking to take ownership of real estate, and it's happening everywhere. And you have this movement of individuals kind of going like, Hey, like people should never profit off of real estate. And unfortunately, that ideology is what the government is using to take control. If we look at data from 2001 to 2015, there is a slow and steady trend towards more corporations owning single family homes, apartments, office spaces and less and less individuals actually owning real estate. Blackstone Group actually recently raised a record of $50 billion to take homes from American families.

Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
During the pandemic when all people were ordered to lock down indoors. Why did governments around the world make exceptions for mass protests? We've all heard the term fire sale in this case. It's not a metaphor. When a community is damaged by protests, the value of local properties plummet. Investors then gobble up the devalued real estate for pennies on the dollar in many cases. The leaders of the decimated communities receive kickbacks for allowing this transfer of wealth.
Big companies and investment firms swooping in and buying up some of the only affordable homes in your neighborhood.

The more you have individuals not own their own home, the more you have individuals not financially independent creates more dependance on big financial corporations that profit off of mass people. So we are going towards a world where the people are owning nothing. I always say, like, if we don't own anything, well, who does?

It's a reinstitution of Marxism where, you know, communism owned all the property.

In his Communist manifesto, Karl Marx wrote, The theory of communism may be summed up in a single sentence. Abolition of private property. Karl Marx was a German philosopher and social theorist who lived in the 1800s. He is the coauthor of The Communist Manifesto, which has been referred to as the Bible of Communism. His theories of class conflict and dialectical materialism were instrumental in shaping socialist and communist movements worldwide. Joseph Stalin. Vladimir Lenin. Leon Trotsky. Mao Zedong. Che Guevara. Fidel Castro. Kim Jong UN. Hugo Chavez. Nicolas Maduro and many other communist revolutionaries have cited Marxism as the foundation of their political ideologies. Marx rejected all concepts of God as well as the traditional family, according to members of his own family. Marx was emotionally, verbally and physically abusive. His wife, Jenny, was plagued by depression, which was compounded by Karl's adulterous impulses and his inability to provide for his children, despite his privileged upbringing and formal education. Karl Marx was often unwilling to work and instead relied on the financial support of friends and family.

In 1943, the following directive was issued from party headquarters to all Communists in the United States. It read. When certain obstructionists become too irritating, label them as fascist or Nazi or anti-Semitic in the public mind. Constantly associate those who oppose us with those names which already have a bad smell. The association will, after enough repetition, become fact in the public mind.

The founding fathers were racist, misogynist, fascist,

Fascist, political party, radicals on the far right, anti-Semitic.

[00:54:15] G. Edward Griffin
As early as 1928, the Communist declared that the racial differences among our people. Constituted the weakest and most vulnerable point in our social fabric. By constantly probing and straining at this one spot, they calculated that eventually the cloth could be torn apart and that Americans could be divided, weakened, and perhaps even set against each other in open combat. They said in no unmistakable terms that the Negro people, because of their social status and their predominant working class composition, offered greater revolutionary possibilities than any other cross-section of the population.

[00:55:05] G. Edward Griffin
The communists call not only for extensive chaos within the cities. The plan is for raging fires from one city to the next. The average American may say soft and decadent when he sees billows of black smoke rising from one horizon to the other, when at night the only light he has to see by is the flickering red from flames leaping into the sky. He'll become paralyzed with fear and panic and do nothing to interfere with the guerrilla bands as they strike at the community's power centers. Precinct two, the threat to justify violence. They have to be able to claim that they're liberating people. And if people are to be liberated, then it's necessary to go through the motions at least, of pretending that they have a right to form a nation of their own. The Communist Party called for their liberation to break away from the United States and to set up their own nation within our borders.

[00:56:29] G. Edward Griffin
Now, when they talk about pressure from above, they mean using their people and their influence within the very government marked for takeover to bring forward official recommendations for legislation. The recommendations, of course, are offered supposedly as solutions to national problems. But when passed into law, their only real effect is to vastly increase the power of government and to move the country that much closer toward the ultimate goal. The pressure from below then involves using their influence over the various mass membership organizations of the country to create the appearance of great popular support for these recommendations. Of course, the members of those organizations must never suspect that they're being used to promote the communist program. Now, the silent majority, the average person is caught right in the middle. He looks above and sees highly respected spokesmen for government calling for socialist legislation. He looks below and sees mobs of demonstrators shouting for the same thing he says to himself, Has everyone gone crazy or is it me? Now he's still in the majority, of course, but he doesn't know it. He thinks he's helplessly outnumbered and he bows to what he thinks is the democratic will of the majority.

[00:57:49] Zuby, Author/Podcast Host
Here's an interesting thing I've noticed is even with a lot of these ideologies, right, with what people call these days woke, if people were these horrible, awful, bigoted, racist, xenophobic white people, it wouldn't even work. The only reason it even works is because people are so compassionate that they oh, like I want to make sure I use the right words and I say the right phrases. So you're actually weaponizing the fact that people are decent people and you're taking that compassion and you're targeting it at, Oh, this is the group of people who you should be angry at. They weaponized human compassion.

[00:58:30] G. Edward Griffin
We mustn't kid ourselves into thinking that the Communists have placed their agitators only into the black communities. They're working both sides of the street. They want hatred, violence and bloodshed between the races. And they don't care how they get it or whom they use, even children if necessary.

Because the real objective is to remove the family as a possible alternate source of guidance and support. All totalitarian regimes strive to destroy the close knit family in order to remove any loyalties that might be higher than to the state itself.

Mark McDonald M.D. Author of United States of Fear
I have seen over the years in my practice a steady decline in the expression of healthy masculinity and healthy femininity. The separation between the male and the female is almost complete now, and it's due specifically to the ongoing attacks against masculinity and the degradation of femininity. And if our family structure is lost in the next generation, what do we have left? We're just a bunch of listless individuals living our lives out virtually behind a computer screen and following the orders of the government.

And it was just really cool to hear him make that connection. [01:09:56] Mark McDonald M.D. Author of United States of Fear
This is well known and well researched in the psychological literature and the psychiatric literature that when someone is afraid, when someone is in a state of fear, that person cannot think rationally. You resort back to a more primitive way of making decisions, which is highly emotionally driven. And when you're placed in a chronic state of fear, as we have been, you end up in a what I would call a traumatized state, meaning that you're not just momentarily scared, you are frozen. You have seen your ability to think critically suspended.

[01:10:29] David. E. Martin, PHD, National Intelligence Analyst
The issue is not about Covid or vaccines or anything else. It's not that. That is the polarizing impulse that gives rise to our general sense of ill at ease, which then amplifies our willingness to fall for reflexive classifications like race or, you know, the isms that we want to fight about. The more we can distract people by creating the illusion that says everything is fearful, the more we can manipulate the population.

All of these fears are grounded to some degree in reality, they're not completely invented, but they are exaggerated so greatly that we cannot actually reason through them anymore.

[01:11:38] Zuby, Author/Podcast Host
When people are afraid they won't just accept authoritarianism, they'll demand it. They all demanded somebody do something. Somebody take charge and tell me what to do. Like, where do I stand? Where do I walk? What do we do? What are the rules? And again, people in power always use that, right? When they say, never let a good crisis go to waste. We can take this and we can now enact policies that normally we wouldn't be able to get away with.

[01:12:02] Yuval Noah Harari, Advisor, World Economic Forum
Maybe in a couple of decades. When people look back, the thing they will remember from the Covid crisis, this was the moment that we agreed to be surveyed all the time.

[01:12:13] Zuby, Author/Podcast Host
And maybe even after the event is over, maybe we can still keep 30% and over time, multiple crises. Oh, suddenly you have a government or an individual who has far more power than they're actually supposed to.

[01:12:27] Prof. Mattias Desmet, Author, The Psychology of Totalitarianism
The leaders of the mass, the people who pronounce the narrative in public space usually or hypnotized themselves. They believe they need to reshape society to be able to deal with the challenges society faces. And they believe so fanatically in that ideology that they think it's justified to manipulate and cheat and to use all kinds of narratives to convince people to go along with that ideology.

[01:16:10] G. Edward Griffin
There was a time and not too long ago, I think, when we could have pulled ourselves out of this without too great a sacrifice on the part of anyone. But we didn't. Instead, we slept. Everywhere I look, I see men and women who know that communists are making headway in this country. They know that something must be done and that someone must stand up to them. But they themselves do nothing. They remain silent because they're afraid that if they speak out, it'll be bad for business. They may lose a client, they may even lose their jobs. Or perhaps they're receiving a regular government check and already are too dependent upon some of the very people and programs they know they should oppose. We have now passed the point of painless solutions and parlor patriotism. Well, all right. So what do we do about it? What are the countermeasures that need to be taken and where do we begin? Before we finally win this battle, and I should hasten to say that there's no doubt in my mind that we're going to win. I'm increasingly convinced of this. But before we finally do see victory, we must carry the truth to every man, woman and child in America. I have no idea of what each of you is going to do in the critical days that lie ahead. It may be much. It may be little. It may be nothing at all. I don't know. Only you can answer that question. But ladies and gentlemen, whatever it is you decide to do for your country, do it soon. Do it now. Every minute that you delay further will add dearly to the price of ultimate victory.

[01:18:12] Mikki Willis, Director of Pandemic series
Mr. Griffin, That was over 50 years ago. Where are we now?

Hearing that phrase after all these years is kind of a shocker, because I didn't realize really at the time how accurate it was going to be. But we're in the middle of it now. And so the ultimate victory is still ahead of us.

[01:18:31] Mikki Willis, Director of Pandemic series
How did you know way back then what would be happening today?

[01:18:35] G. Edward Griffin
It's a long story, of course, but I did take a fascinating tour of the Communist bookstore in Los Angeles when I was very, very young. I was working for an insurance company. I was Mr. Corporate America. You know, that was the period when the hippie image was pretty popular. And a lot of these guys in that bookstore were in that uniform. And I think they felt I was a potential recruit, you know?

[01:18:58] Female Voice
Yes. We've always been quite willing to talk.

[01:19:00] Male Voice
I would talk about socialism anywhere in the streets or in the Senate, anywhere. You know.

[01:19:05] Male Voice
They're a communist faction making a big power play for us here. Is there any communist back here? I guess there is.

Yes, they are communists. And yet our nation seems unconcerned. Many newspapers television commentators and educators call these young revolutionaries dissidents. But are these voices voices of mere dissent, of mere student unrest or of sedition and revolution?
They invited me to come to their study groups they called them. They were really recruiting funnel, you know. And I didn't have to pretend to be interested because I was interested. I wanted to see what these guys were up too. In the course, the more I read, the more I realized that these guys were deadly serious. And so my crusader Gene said, Hey, buddy, you better stop worrying about the corporate ladder and making money and looking good and start doing something about it. And I'm glad I did because after that point, my life had a meaning. It had had a purpose more than just self-centered.

Who are some of the key figures behind this agenda?

I'm not sure we can name names. We know that there are layers and layers of control and influence, sort of pyramidal in form at the bottom level, of course, it's just all the common people. Most of them don't even know what's going on. It used to be that an invader could come in with a superior army and people resent it, but they obey because if they don't, they get killed. Now, if they want to conquer people in this environment, they have to do it through the mind. And of course, today, after all the technology that we have and the control over the communications and the images and the school system and the media, they have absolute control over the funnel of information that comes to the average person and the average person. If they're not aware that there's a real war going on for their mind, they will be helpless. And as long as people are on the edge of fear, they're willing to give up their liberties and pay lots and lots in taxes.

A tax on carbon.

And as I passed her that idea that in my view, the enemy is in a category called collectivism, and that's the word that applies to all of these things socialism, communism, fascism, naziism, all of these things are merely variants of collectivism. That is the philosophy based on the assumption that the group is more important than the individual and that the individual must be sacrificed if necessary, for the greater good of the greater number. That's the trick. They say you're doing this for society.

Obviously you don't like to tell people what to do, but sometimes for the good of society that's necessary.

We have to start doing things for the greater good of society and not for idiots who think that they can do their own research.

But it's not about me and my rights to choose. It's about how I love my neighbor.

You are not doing this for yourself. If you are at all like me, your own health, your own risk is not a big rational driver of all of your actions.

They trick us into thinking that if you act in your own self-interest that somehow you are selfish and nothing could be further from the truth. Those of us who have discovered this trick long ago, we realize that enlightened self-interest comes into play. If you are acting out of self-interest, you soon discover that the best way to benefit yourself is to help other people. It does come back.

The question is how do we turn the ship around?

They think that the path to political hell in America has been voting for the lesser of two evils. They create conflict because the conflict creates fear and confusion. And out of that chaos, people are not too analytical. They'll just struggle for some quick answer, which is who are you going to vote for? That's usually the answer that's offered to them. They think that if you just vote for somebody, the right person, everything will go away. You cannot wait until there's a list of candidates that's published and you say, Which 1 am I going to choose? You know, by that time the game is over. All those candidates have been selected before you were even aware. You've got to get into politics at the local level so you have some influence in which candidates are selected, and that starts at the grassroots level. You don't come in at the top. You come in at the bottom. If we do that job, we will influence both political parties, just like our opponents do now.

There is actually a way forward and a way out, but it's going to require work. And it's also going to require that we acknowledge that we have wronged ourselves, that we are part of this problem. It's not the government that caused this. The government facilitated it. What caused it was our being asleep at the wheel without taking accountability. We cannot move forward.

The masses of humanity have been slapped awake in a very short period of time to where now it has created a domino effect of awareness all across the planet. People cannot go back into the Matrix now. They can't. A lot of people are trying to and they can't.
We have the right as citizens in this country to abolish a government and create a new one, and that is the authority that has been given to us. It is written in our documents the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States, the Declaration of Human Rights. We have indelible rights. And the basis of those rights are our freedoms. And if we don't have that, we don't have life. And so we must awaken, we have to arise, we have to fight.

The natural rights of every individual is life, liberty and property and establishing a country on a premise that it never been established before, that the individual is sovereign because their rights are endowed to them by a sovereign God.

This which has happened can only be described as divine. Which is why we're the nation. Our ideology, our way of life is always under this relentless attack that we have defeated over and over again. And we will defeat it this time.

The only real problem that's existed in the world, it's division. It's that people are not getting in rooms willing to speak with one another, see each other's hearts and get to know, hey, what do you believe? What do I believe? And is there a way we can actually work together to solve these problems? And I'm willing to bet that most of the Gen Zers would say, yes, that's what we need to do right now. And that's why I'm glad we're at the age that we are because we can be leaders of that conversation.

When I started to realize like, wow, freedom's a polarizing concept. For some reason I thought this was America. Is this America? It is. Okay. World's different than I thought. So my fear was I'm going to I could lose everything. I could lose my audience. I could lose my business. But I knew, especially having a son come into the world, I am imprinting something on his beautiful, innocent, fragile psyche and heart. I'm imprinting the man that I am or I'm imprinting a hollow shell of the man that I refuse to be. And I knew in that moment I'm willing to risk losing everything to do that. I would rather pick up cans on the side of the highway to feed my family than to live out of alignment with my truth and betray my son.

Just say no. Rise up in a nonviolent way. You can't imprison everyone. They can't fire everyone. But they can fire individuals that are separated and don't work together and give in to the fear and don't sacrifice your future for a few conveniences now in the present. You should sacrifice maybe the present conveniences so that you can have a future.

The media has done a good job at stripping from us our ability to think on our own and for ourselves. We can get back to that. I think that we can build a stronger America.

In my opinion, the first step you have to take is you have to get out from under the control mechanisms, and that means blow up your TV. Don't listen to the fear porn and set yourself free of debt, which is what controls you and controls everything around you. It is the weapon that is used.

The most important thing is always that the dissonant voices continue to speak out and also extremely important that they don't start to form a mass or a crowd themselves because that happens very easily as well. Happens very easily. Once a large scale mass formation starts, the people who do not go along with them feel threatened and they can start to form a mass themselves. So it's extremely important not to form a mass ourselves. That means to form a group, a coherent group, and that what unifies this group should in the first place be the fact that everybody who belongs to the group can have his own opinion and can speak in his own way.

What matters most to you?

I think what matters most to me is freedom. Freedom. I want as little laws as necessary to keep us from killing each other. I mean, I get it. There's crazy people out there. We have to find a balance. In the end, I want my children to live in a world where they are free to dream, to take risks, to fail, to succeed.

Hardship strengthens us. We wouldn't have had the American Revolution and the beta model for the American Constitution. The beta model of a republic in the modern world. Unless the tyranny of King George had been unbearable, all the good things in life usually are a result of some kind of a rebound against something that's very not good at all. Very painful.
[01:30:14] Del Bigtree, Host of The Highwire
I think about it if someone had jumped in there and taken away my failures, I can't do what I'm doing now, if someone had kept me from really hurting, really learning lessons that were hard to learn so that I would never make that mistake again.

[01:30:29] G. Edward Griffin
In a philosophical sense, we should be thankful for this movement that's happening in spite of the fact that it's it's tragedy and it's hurting people and all that. But without it, we might just go right along in that pot and be boiled in time. But now the frog is jumping out and we have a chance coming up here now to create a new vision. And it's going to be great.

[01:30:51] Prof. Mattias Desmet, Author, The Psychology of Totalitarianism
It's a bit cynical, but it is, in the end, good news that mass formation and totalitarianism always destroys itself in a relatively short time span. And the most important thing, of course, is that you have to make sure that the system does not destroy you before it destroys itself.

Throughout history, it was always the very small minority. History has always been written by the 1% of the population. The 15% of the population create history. And they followed the leadership of the thought leadership of 1%. But that 15% altogether is what changes history. And so all we have to do is reach 15% of the population. I think today, after all this time, we have more than 15%. We just have to get them together so they realize that they're not alone. And that's our task right now.

[01:31:46] Zuby, Author/Podcast Host
I don't think our societies have taken the moment to look up and actually see and appreciate how much progress has been made in the past century on so many different levels. We have made incredible progress. Like what we've got here is actually great. It's imperfect, and we should still be making tweaks carefully to try to make it better. And I think that's where so much of that self-hatred or hatred of the nation or hatred of the other or whatever comes from this lack of perspective and gratitude and inability to take a moment, chill out on the activism and go, wait, actually. Okay. We've achieved a very unique and special point in history. And let's be let's be careful with that.

[01:32:31] Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series

[01:32:34] Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
Have you experienced any nation that has course corrected beyond their sins more than the US has?

[01:32:41] Zuby, Author/Podcast Host
Uh, no.

[01:32:43] Lily Tang Williams, Chinese Immigrant/Educator
It's a sad to say Americans who live in a free country, born as Americans and do not recognize their privileges. You are born American, a free country. You never suffered a starvation and you need to go to other countries to find out why. All the immigrants, many millions of them, want to come here.

[01:33:09] Maximo Alvarez
What is happening in our backyard today, I experienced as an 11 year old. I remember vividly. All the promises that a guy named Castro gave and how 95% of the people swallow the pill. He was going to save Cuba. I remember how he promised to the farmers, to the guajiro that you're going to own the land. I remember all the promises that we hear today about free education and free health care and free land and my God. No freedom.

[01:34:12] G. Edward Griffin
The defectors here that are speaking out against the Communist Party in China are risking their lives. And our government is not interested in listening to them or helping them in any way.

I have been in America for ten years. I saw a lot of Americans with a wonderful heart. America is a beacon of freedom. I'm happy living in this land to practice my religion and to have a peaceful life. That's my hope.

[01:35:07] Lily Tang Williams, Chinese Immigrant/Educator
America is last stand on earth for freedom. If we lose this country, the world will be a very dark place. I have three children in this country. I want to protect their American dream. So here I am, you know.

[01:35:30] Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
I've noticed that every time you speak about America, your eyes fill with tears.
Our benefactors involved responsibilities. As G. Edward Griffin within communication, defined this.

[01:38:36] Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
We've been brought together in this moment to face the urgent choice between dehumanization and re-humanization. Dehumanization requires us to do nothing. Nothing other than to allow that process to continue to the point of no return. Rehumanization, on the other hand, requires action. One action. To remember. To remember what we knew as children when everything was possible before. Our attention was captured before the conditioning set in. Before. Our nature was denied. There's nothing new we have to learn. All we have to do, is to remember.

[01:38:02] David. E. Martin, PHD, National Intelligence Analyst
And then take the hand of that memory and go out and stand on ground. Not concrete. Not asphalt. Stand on ground. And see if you can feel the heartbeat of a universe that conspired to give you life. So you once again can feel. The joy of being completely human. And then never forget that moment.

[01:37:19] Mikki Willis, Director of Plandemic series
This is the moment for us to activate our innate ability to create solutions that can only happen through the awareness of symbiosis defined as a mutually beneficial relationship between different groups. All of life depends on relationships. Every living thing is in communication, from the stars to the planets, the earth, the plants, the elements, the insects, the animals, the humans, and every cell within us. Real change out there begins with real change inside.

[01:38:36] G. Edward Griffin
As Americans today, we are truly a privileged people in a privileged land. But with our blessings come responsibilities. And with responsibilities come risks. The challenge of our time is that we must accept both the responsibilities of our blessings and the risks involved in defending them for ourselves and for future generations. And we must do this without hesitation if we are to be worthy benefactors of that precious heritage of freedom passed on to us through the epic sacrifices of those who have gone before. Now, that is not flag waving and it is not cliched patriotism. That's a simple statement of the obligations of citizenship in this glorious land. Our land, which with God's help. We shall preserve.
